City Clock Fixed; Tolling Is Begun

If you happen to be walking down Main Street today, take a look at the clock in the tower of City Hall. It should be giving you the correct time, enunciated on the hour with the deep bass tone of the clock's bell.

According to Bob Rodgers, owner of Rodgers Clock Service, Harrisburg, the clock was in operation Tuesday night. Rodgers and his assistant Tom Lengel had been working on the clock since early Monday.

Repair of the clock is due mainly to the efforts of the City Hall Restoration Committee and numerous public-spirited citizens who have contributed to the fund.

The scheduled inspection of the clock tower by architect Thomas C. Horlacher this past Saturday was postponed to a future date because of severe weather conditions.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the Restoration Fund may do so by sending their donations to the Restoration Committee, 41 N. Church St., Carbondale, Pa. 18407.
